

We are creating two new special sections in The Appalachian Artisan Society Gallery for local writers and musicians. If you have published a book or several books or produced a packaged CD or several CDs and live with-in our demographic area of acceptance you will want to participate in this great program.

The cost to get in is minimal, just an annual membership fee of $50.00 with that fee you will get the opportunity to sell and market your product.

TAAS-Gallery has one of the best artisan marketing programs ever developed. Winning praise from its members as a true marketing tool that launches the artists into a global selling platform while maintaining the local presence.

With each membership account you get

- listed on our Artisan Members Page
- Listed on our special section page (Local books or Local Music)
- Have your own webpage which includes:
 - Biography or information
 - Ecommerce shopping cart
 - Login to your account and see all sales transactions
 - Reciprocal web link (if you have a website)
- Sell your product in the special section in TAAS-Gallery situated in the heart of a revitalizing downtown mountain community, Old Fort.

All sales will be assessed @ just 30%. This is 20% below the typical wholesale to retail pricing that the typical retail outlets would require.

Both of these programs will be more successful with a large participation of specialty members. Our goal is to work with at least 25 new members for each group. We begin our search for new members for these two sections in January 2008 with an anticipated section unveiling the first week of March.
